The Protocol School of Washington

Congratulations to the Graduates of PSOW's First Online Protocol Officer Training Certificate Program

The Protocol School of Washington warmly congratulates the inaugural class of students who completed the first live/online, Instructor Led Distance Learning Protocol Officer Training Certificate course in the school's history. Protocol professionals from Australia, Austria, Saudi Arabia, Switzerland, and the United States shared real-world examples during the class discussions, which were led by subject matter experts covering topics including the protocol for official gifts, VIP and special event management, national flags and logo etiquette, leadership and legendary service, and more. For a complete list of classes, visit: www.psow.edu/online. You can also email us at info@psow.edu, call 1.877.766.3757, or use the "chat" feature on our website: www.psow.edu.

Considerations for Events and Gatherings. As some communities in the United States begin to plan and hold events and gatherings, the CDC offers guidance for enhancing protection of individuals and communities and preventing spread of coronavirus disease 2019 (COVID-19). Read more

Adaptability may be your most essential skill in the COVID-19 world. Humans are living through a period of extraordinary change. Familiar routines have been tossed out the window. It's a lot to get used to all at once, and it's not static. So, going forward, adaptability may be our best asset. Read more

4 Ways to Improve Cross-Cultural Communication in a Remote Workplace. Here are four important cultural tips to keep in mind when interacting with learners, colleagues and associates during global virtual meetings. Read more

Don't Work On Vacation. Seriously. The recent global shift to remote work due to the COVID-19 crisis may cause employees to feel conflicted about what time is — and isn't — meant for working. Read more
